Crying baby at Alinea inspires heated controversy

Chicago Tribune

You're out to dinner at one of Chicago's most acclaimed restaurants. It cost $470 to reserve a table for two several months ago, and you're reveling in the elaborate menu when you hear it: a baby crying.

What should or should not happen next remains a fiery debate on Twitter, Facebook and parenting blogs three days after Alinea owner Grant Achatz shared the real-time example and his own uncertainty on the issue on Twitter: "Tbl brings 8mo. Old. It cries. Diners mad. Tell ppl no kids? Subject diners 2crying? Ppl take infants 2 plays? Concerts? Hate saying no, but.."

Achatz did not ask the parents to leave, noting that the baby's presence was prompted by a last-minute babysitter cancellation. But since the tweet, the situation has prompted discussions on NBC's "Today" and ABC's "Good Morning America," and a popular new Twitter handle, @alineababy.

Award-winning chefs and parenting experts have called for both new restaurant policies and more understanding. And parents and nonparents in Chicago are searching for reasonable guidelines on what is acceptable—or not—when it comes to bringing children to fine-dining establishments, theaters and other public spaces.

Alinea, the 64-seat restaurant with a coveted three-Michelin-star rating and repeated rankings as one of the best in the world, carefully outlines its guidelines on its website. Drinks and gratuity are not included in the $210-$265 pre-paid tasting menu. Arrive 15 minutes before your ticket time. Tickets are non-refundable, but transferable to friends, neighbors or anyone who can take your place.

But Alinea lists no special rules about children. In an email Tuesday, co-owner Nick Kokonas said the restaurant has no plans to change its policy.

"We welcome children of all ages who can enjoy the meal—there probably isn't an age limit," he said. "And we've had babies that have slept right through the dinner happily. However, like all guests, we ask that a level of decorum is followed that at a minimum does not infringe on the ability of other patrons to enjoy their meal at Alinea."

The Lyric Opera does not allow babies. The Goodman Theater notes in its program book that "babes in arms are not permitted." And the Chicago Symphony Orchestra does not permit children younger than 2.

For restaurant owners, the rules are not as clear-cut.

Chicago chef Carrie Nahabedian calls the issue of kids at a restaurant a touchy subject. Management encourages diners with infants to come at an earlier hour, when it's easier to accommodate a stroller, Nahabedian said.

"Problems develop when guests arrive at the middle of a very heavy dinner service and then complain about the noise for their children," she added. "We have had a few times where we offered mothers the private dining room for them to entertain their kids, nurse or just quiet time."

Places worth crying about

Lisa Arnett

» @redeyecats

There was plenty to rave and rant about on Twitter last weekend, from the Seahawks beating the Saints to the travesty that was Zoe Saldana's Golden Globes dress. (It had to be a sick joke played on her by designer Prabal Gurung, right?)

But what really consumed Chicago was a tweet that Alinea chef Grant Achatz sent Saturday night about a couple bringing a baby to dinner. "Tbi brings 8mo.Old. It cries. Diners mad. Tell ppl no kids? Subject diners 2crying? Ppl take infants 2 plays? Concerts? Hate saying no,but.." he tweeted via @Gachatz.

Comments boiled into a heated debate. Why would anyone bring an infant to one of the city's fanciest, most expensive restaurants? How could the restaurant allow it? If the couple's baby sitter canceled and their tickets to dinner were nonrefundable, what choice did they have?

Next came a parody account (@AlineaBaby) and a Yelp review written from the baby's point of view. By the time national news had picked up the story, the whole hoopla had been christened Babygate. (Speaking of, couldn't someone at "Good Morning America" have clued in George Stephanopoulos on the right way to pronounce Alinea?)

Whether or not it's OK to bring children to special-occasion restaurants has been obsessed over on social media before; remember the kerfuffle that ensued when chef Dale Levitski declared brunch at his former Sprout no-kids-allowed? If a crying baby distracts you from your $10 noontime bloody mary, I can't imagine how you'd feel if you had dropped hundreds on tickets for a nearly-impossible-to-get-in, award-winning restaurant such as Alinea.

GETTYIMAGES

Though the couple's identity wasn't disclosed, I bet Alinea's Babygate diners are feeling some serious shame about now. At the time, they may have thought the worst-case scenario would be their kiddo having a full-on meltdown and having to make a hasty exit, leaving some of their courses uneaten. Now they're the subject of national new headlines such as "Couple 'Crashes' Fancy Restaurant."

Still, it could have been worse. They could have brought their kid to any number of other places, right? And with that, I'll leave you with my Top 5 list of Chicago places that are more inappropriate to bring your 8-month-old to than Alinea.

5 El Hefe Super Macho Taqueria on a Sunday afternoon. The servers here sometimes wear tutus, but this raucous day party is no Tiny Tots ballet class.

4 2-for-1 Tuesdays at Admiral Theatre. The "Bring a friend!" tagline does not apply to your offspring.

3 Porn & Chicken night at Evil Olive. All the free chicken wings in the world won't make up for scarring your kid for life.

2 The Wiener's Circle. Because some drunken bro is bound to order the chocolate milkshake.

1 Spin in Boystown, during the Friday night shower contest. Enough said.

NOT THIS ONE AGAIN ...

There are a number of ways people get scammed. Don't fall for these three common online swindles. L.V.

Bogus rentals

The owner of an apartment or vacation home asks the interested renter to wire money for an application fee, deposit or rent. The renters might be told the owners are out of the country but there's a plan to give them the keys. The money gets wired, only there's no rental. Either there never was a rental or the con artist stole a rental listing, changed the contact info and posted it online.

Impostor scams

Someone claiming to be a family member calls, texts or emails, asking for cash to be wired for an emergency, such as to fix a car, get out of jail or leave a foreign country. There may be more than one con artist in on the scheme who acts as an authority figure. If money is sent, it's likely there will be additional requests for more money.

Online dating scams

Con artists create fake profiles, build online relationships and convince people to send them money for travel, medical emergencies or other expenses. They say they plan to visit or claim to be working overseas or traveling. They can even make wedding plans before disappearing with the money.

'THE WOLF OF WALL STREET'

'AMERICAN HUSTLE'

'CATCH ME IF YOU CAN'

By Leonor Vivanco | REDEYE

Gail Bullock got the letter in the mail at what seemed like the perfect time.

In 2012, she was living paycheck to paycheck. She had just been laid off from her job as a home care aide. She was on the verge of losing her apartment. And then she opened a letter that said she had won more than $1 million in a sweepstakes.

"I figured that would be the answer to my prayers," said Bullock, 48, who lives in Woodlawn with her daughter.

To get her winnings, all she had to do was send more than $400 through Western Union for a processing fee. She was instructed to deposit the check into a bank account, but instead she took it to a currency exchange where she found out it was a fake.

Bullock is far from the only one who has fallen for such scams. An estimated 25.6 million people—10.8 percent of U.S. adults—said they were fraud victims in 2011, according to the results of a consumer fraud survey by the Federal Trade Commission released in 2013.

Hollywood has taken note. Scams and con artists have once again become the center of attention in movies from "The Wolf of Wall Street" and "American Hustle" to an HBO film in the works titled "The Wizard of Lies" about Ponzi scheme mastermind Bernie Madoff. Casting frauds, impostors and swindlers in leading roles isn't exactly new, and neither is the art of conning people. The twists and turns of scams—true or exaggerated—always seem to capture the attention of and fascinate the American public.

"There's a certain kind of drama in those stories. Con artists have to use their wiles and work their con, and it unfolds usually. You see people getting sucked into, step by step, the deception, lies and fraud," said Arthur Lurigio, psychology and criminal justice professor at Loyola University Chicago.

In reality, con artists—short for "confidence" artists—can manipulate their targets in person or from behind a computer. Generally, they have a knack for gaining people's trust based on false promises and credentials. They take advantages of weaknesses such as loneliness or financial ignorance, experts say.

They usually have no remorse, empathy for their victims or guilt about their crime. They can be witty, entertaining and adept at fooling their victims by using the right lingo and assuming phony roles—like one of America's most prominent con artists, Frank Abagnale, whose swindles in the '60s and '70s were the basis of the 2002 movie "Catch Me If You Can."

While many steal and embezzle, the scams aren't all about money.

"It's about the excitement of engaging in the con," Lurigio said. "It's gratifying for them to gain power and control over another person. There's some risk involved so it's thrill-seeking behavior."

More often than not, though, the ruses begin to unravel. Successful con artists can get careless, increasing the likelihood of getting caught. And as victims pile up, so do the reports of their crimes.

"It's basically the notion of accumulating a record of evidence of fraudulent behavior that eventually catches up to you, and that's why con artists move around a lot," Lurigio said.

Until then, they are able to design ploys to get what they want.

"What makes them successful is they can be very charming. They are believers in their own invention. When you believe in something, you deliver it very well," said Tamar Frankel, Boston University law professor and author of "The Ponzi Scheme Puzzle: A History and Analysis of Con Artists and Victims."

People often ignore the signs that they might be getting played. Red flags such as requests for money in advance, undue pressure and promises of getting rich quick often go without deeper investigation.

If it's too good to be true, it probably is. "If it's illegal a little bit, keep away. If it's a secret, keep away. If you don't get all the information, keep away. If there's a lot of charm but no substance, run," Frankel said.

People should not wire cash, pay for taxes or transfer fees for a so-called lottery win, said Tom Joyce, spokesman for Better Business Bureau in Chicago. Also, people should be careful about getting college loan debt relief or help with fixing their credit.

"Scammers are smart, and these scams work because people send them money. If people didn't send money, they'd stop doing it," Joyce said.

In hindsight, the red flags were there for Bullock, who ended up reporting the sweepstakes scam to the Better Business Bureau. "I don't even enter sweepstakes.

My luck isn't that good so I don't even bother with them. I don't even play the lottery," Bullock, who now has a part-time job, said.

"It hurt because that $435—I could have really used that money. ... I just tried to get on with my life and forget I threw away $435 for no reason." LWVANCOC@TRIBUNE.COM | @LWVANCOC

WHO'S THAT CON?

A number of movies have cast well-known actors in leading roles as con artists. Here's a sample of con artists getting screen time.

FIGHT BACK

People who get scammed can report it to a number of agencies, including the Better Business Bureau, National Fraud Information Center, the Illinois Attorney General's Office, Cook County State's Attorney's consumer fraud unit, Federal Trade Commission and the FBI's Internet Crime Complaint Center. If there is a loss of money, people are urged to file a police report, because it can be considered theft.

A home for 'Jesus'

Charity wants bronze statue placed among public art

Chicago Tribune

The life-size sculpture of a homeless man on a bench, with all but his feet shrouded by a blanket, is intended to get the attention of anyone who takes a seat there.

But closer examination reveals the most striking detail in the figure's exposed extremities—holes from when Christians believe the man depicted under the blanket was nailed to the cross more than 2,000 years ago.

Titled "Jesus the Homeless," the sculpture cast in 2012 by Canadian artist Tim Schmalz has captured the imagination of Roman Catholic leaders around the world since the election of Pope Francis. In fact, the statue even grabbed the attention of the pope himself.

Now, sometime this spring, Chicago's Catholic Charities wants to place a version of the statue either on its own property or among the assortment of outdoor sculptures on display around the city's central business district to keep Chicago's poor and homeless always in the public eye.

"Since March, we've heard from Pope Francis about the importance of lifting up the poor and identifying with them and trying to see if we can find ways to help them," said Monsignor Michael Boland, president and CEO of Catholic Charities. "A lot of the things the pope is talking about are embodied in this piece."

The only thing that stands in the charity's way is any substantial cost associated with installing and maintaining the work in a public space. Boland said his group's money is primarily spent on food, clothing and shelter for the poor.

Schmalz, who met and had a model of the original work blessed by the pope, appreciates that the group wants to give his work a prominent place in a major city.

"I never thought that costs would be a concern," said Schmalz, 44, of Toronto. "I'd like to see the piece placed in, basically, a spot that the visual message is needed."

Getting people to appreciate the artist's unconventional portrayals of Jesus has been a challenge for a while, he said.

Schmalz hopes Chicago will be able to drive home the message of the piece by installing it in a commercial district, joining a number of the city's other outdoor sculptures by Pablo Picasso, Joan Miro, Marc Chagall and Alexander Calder.

WHERE WILL IT GO?

A spokeswoman for Catholic Charities said requests for food and clothing have overwhelmed the agency this winter and made securing a public place for the statue less of a priority. For now, the president and CEO of Catholic Charities plans to place the sculpture outside Catholic Charities' headquarters.

Thousands cleared to start using tap water

1 West Virginia officials on Tuesday lifted a ban on drinking tap water for customers who had been affected by a chemical spill that left the state's water supply nearly unusable for hundreds of thousands since last week. A total of about 38,000 customers can now use tap water.

Shooter at Florida movie theater charged

2 The man charged with shooting and killing a fellow moviegoer during an argument over cellphone use in a Florida theater is a retired police officer who says he feared being attacked. Curtis Reeves, 71, a former Tampa police captain, was charged with second-degree murder after Monday's shooting.

11 killed in clashes over vote in Egypt

3 At least 11 people were reported killed in Egypt on Tuesday, the first day of voting on a proposed constitution, in clashes between supporters of ousted president Mohammed Morsi and security forces. The referendum was widely viewed as a verdict not only on the proposed constitution, but on whether the army was correct to remove Morsi from power.

Russia acknowledges barring U.S. reporter

4 The Russian Foreign Ministry acknowledged Tuesday that it had barred a prominent American journalist from the country for five years after expelling him over a visa violation, an action that the ousted reporter and some Kremlin critics said was a chilling throwback to the Cold War.

Judge rejects NFL concussion settlement

A $760 million settlement between the NFL and thousands of former players, who contend the league downplayed the risk of concussions, was rejected Tuesday by a judge who said it might not be enough to pay all of the affected players.

Christie sorry over scandals

5 New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie opened his State of the State Address on Tuesday with an apology and a vow to fully cooperate with "all appropriate" investigations of an apparent scheme to cause massive traffic jams as well as the use of federal money for a state ad campaign.

Christie, a charismatic conservative and an early favorite in the Republican bid for the White House in 2016, was re-elected in a landslide victory last November—but the pair of scandals coming in the first weeks of the year have put him on the defensive.

"The last week has certainly tested this administration. Mistakes were clearly made. And as a result, we let down the people we are entrusted to serve," Christie said. "Without a doubt, we will cooperate with all appropriate inquiries to ensure that this breach of trust does not happen again."

Two sets of emails last week appeared to show that Christie's aides had orchestrated lane closures for several days last September on a stretch of highway leading to the George Washington Bridge, which spans the Hudson River between New Jersey and Manhattan, and then lied about it.

Christie has denied any knowledge of the apparent orchestration to snarl traffic at the bridge as political payback against the Democratic mayor of the nearby city of Fort Lee, N.J., for his refusal to endorse Christie's gubernatorial bid.

But the governor's speech mostly addressed the "Jersey Comeback," which Christie has long claimed has resulted in private sector jobs and secured public-private investment in the Garden State, and his cooperation with the Democrat-controlled state legislature.

POLL TOLL

A Reuters/Ipsos poll showed the bridge closure scandal had taken a toll on Christie's image, with 26 percent of those asked saying they were now less favorable toward him, compared with 3 percent who said they were more favorable and 41 percent whose view was the same.

Still, the state's fiscal situation and Christie's ideas for improving it could be overshadowed by his response to the scandals and speculation about his political future.

2 students wounded in N.M. school shooting

6 ROSWELL, N.M. A 12-year-old boy armed with a shotgun opened fire at a middle school in New Mexico on Tuesday, seriously wounding two students before a staff member persuaded him to put down the firearm, authorities said.

The shooting at Berrendo Middle School in Roswell took place in a gym where students had gathered to stay warm from the frigid weather outside before the start of class, Gov. Susana Martinez told reporters.

"The shooter was quickly stopped by one staff member who walked right up to him and asked him to set down the firearm, which he did," Martinez said.

The wounded students were taken to a local hospital, where they were stabilized. They were then flown by helicopter to University Medical Center in Lubbock, Texas, about 150 miles east of Roswell, because that facility has a Level 1 trauma center, said hospital spokesman Eric Finley.

The wounded children were an 11-year-old boy in critical condition and a 12-year-old girl in serious condition, Finley said.

7 Children compete for a prize Tuesday by climbing a greasy pole called Panjat Pinang in Gombak, Malaysia. The group that gets to the top of the greasy pole wins the prize of clothing and cash. GETTY IMAGES

Born in the NBA

Teen Mike Dunleavy would be proud of grown-up Mike Dunleavy

By Bryan Crawford | FOR REDEYE

As the son of a former player and coach in the NBA, Mike Dunleavy Jr. has been around basketball his entire life. Entering his 12th season, the swingman came to Chicago as a free agent last summer to help the Bulls reach their goal of an NBA title.

He might be waiting awhile. Although Dunleavy averages a respectable 11.0 points, 3.9 rebounds and 2.0 assists this season, the Bulls are just 17-19. More important, who knows when Derrick Rose comes back and how effective he'll be?

"This definitely isn't what any of us envisioned at the start of this season," said the 33-year-old Dunleavy, who recently cracked the starting lineup. "But starting doesn't change my approach. ... My body feels good, so if that's what it calls for, I'm ready."

For now, all Dunleavy can do is draw on his extensive experience to help his team reach the playoffs.

Dunleavy's dad, Mike Dunleavy Sr., played 11 seasons in the NBA and spent 17 more years as a head coach with the L.A. Lakers, Milwaukee, Portland and the L.A. Clippers.

"I've wanted to be a basketball player as long as I could remember," Dunleavy Jr. said. "Going to games, going to practices and seeing these guys was cool. That was my dad's job, and I didn't think about doing anything else."

When Dunleavy Jr. was 10, his father took the head coaching job with the Lakers, featuring Magic Johnson and James Worthy. That squad made it to the 1991 NBA Finals before losing to Michael Jordan and the Bulls.

"Magic Johnson is one of the great athletes, leaders and winners of all time," he said. "To be around somebody like that was great."

By the time the younger Dunleavy was ready for high school, his dad had become Portland's head coach.

"I would play some pickup or hop into practice here and there, so that was cool on that end," he said. "During that time in Portland, they had guys who played my position like Steve Smith and Bonzi Wells. So those are the guys that I would match up against."

And how did he do?

"Hey, I was a 16-year-old kid playing against pros," he said, laughing. "So, it was certainly a challenge, but it definitely made me better."

Over the years, Dunleavy says he's taken a lot of advice from his dad, but the most important lesson he says he learned was not anything he was told, but what he saw.

"Preparation was my dad's biggest thing," he said. "I remember him being up late at night, watching film and getting prepared for the next opponent. That's something I've applied to my craft in the years I've been playing. ... I'll keep applying that work ethic to whatever I do."

1	Southpaw vs. Clark the Cub: Who wins in a fight?	Southpaw. The Cubs never win, silly!	Clark, if he's been drinking vodka-Red Bulls. Which he has.	Southpaw is from the wrong side of the tracks. He fights dirty.	Southpaw because he's got that guy who looks like Batman backing him up.	Bryan Bickell. Let's go Hawks!
2	Now that Derrick Rose is off crutches the rest of his recovery will be an ache walk.	... the city is covered in a sheet of ice. Wonderful.	... he'll be able to make another "comeback" commercial for Adidas.	... the countdown officially begins until he gets injured again. sad face	... let's go Hawks!
3	Why is Deion Sanders going to suit up for the Pro Bowl?	He'll be a hip replacement of the current players.	For old timers' sake.	Not enough people have been looking at him lately.	I'm told people sometimes suit up where they aren't supposed to for attention.	Because he's not invited to the Olympics like 10 Blackhawks. Let's go Hawks!
4	If Peyton Manning yells "Omaha!" during games, what should Jay Cutler yell?	"Bromaha."	"DOOOONNNNN'T CARE!"	"Get Bent!"	"Lincoln." Unlike Omaha, it's Nebraska's capital and Illinois' slogan is "Land of ..."	"Thunder Bay, Canada, home of Patrick Sharp!" is too long. Let's go Hawks!
5	What does it mean for Tom Brady to embrace the under-dog role?	That's how babies are made.	Marketing play. Look out for Under Armour: Underdog Edition next season.	Um ... what?	He needs to moonlight as a shoeshine boy and dump Gisele for Polly Purebred.	He's finally coming to terms with the fact he's never won the Stanley Cup. Let's go Hawks!

No mascot is safe

By Mick Swasko | REDEYE

Cubs officials are less than thrilled by the way the Internet has treated their new mascot. After the team revealed its first mascot of the modern era—Clark the Cub—on Monday, it didn't take long for things to get inappropriate. Deadspin was quick to rally its readers, asking them on Monday to "Do something horrible to the Cubs' new, perverted mascot."

The sports blog chipped in a photo of its own, giving Clark a NSFW treatment. Quickly, readers filled the comments section with sex, drugs and boozed-out versions of the bear.

"I'm disappointed at some of the unfortunate images that went from negative to despicable," Julian Green, vice president of communications and community affairs for the Cubs, told ESPN on Tuesday. MSWASKO@TRIBUNE.COM | @MSWASKO

Obama feels the Heat

Unfortunately for Bulls fans, the Heat's victory tour of the White House has become an annual affair. Worse, LeBron James and Co. might be brainwashing the First Fan. "You know, you guys are winning me over a little bit," President Obama said at Tuesday's ceremony. Say it ain't so!

Cheesed off

With the Super Bowl around the corner, visions of appetizers are dancing in Americans' heads. How horrifying, then, this talk of a Velveeta shortage and the prospect of a less-than-stellar nacho dip for the big game! Conveniently, Kraft has launched cheesepocalypse.org to track the areas of the country experiencing shortages of the cheeselike product. To the surprise of no one, conspiracy theorists are adding it to the reasons to suspect the whole thing could be a way to drum up publicity before one of the biggest snacking days of the year.

US PRESSWIRE

Colorado 3, Blackhawks 2 (OT)

Tyson Barrie's fifth goal of the season was a big one—it helped the Avalanche beat Chicago in overtime. The power play goal came just seconds after Jonathan Toews was called for hooking and sent to the penalty box. The Blackhawks struggled most of the night and fell into a 2-0 first-period deficit. A second-period goal by Johnny Oduya and another in the third by Andrew Shaw sent the game into overtime. Corey Crawford blocked 26 shots on the night.

1 Bonzie

Wednesday at Lincoln Hall

Sound in five words or fewer: Catharsis set to acoustic guitar.

Yesterday: Though just 18 years old, the local singer already has opened for Iron & Wine and recorded alongside members of Tortoise.

Today: Bonzie, born Nina Ferraro, plays here behind her wise-beyond-its-years debut, "Rift Into the Secret of Things."

Tomorrow: We'd love to see the Chicagoan share a bill with the like-minded Cat Power.

Tim Hecker

Thursday at Lincoln Hall

Sound in five words or fewer: Experimental electronica with cinematic flair.

Yesterday: The Canadian musician got his start composing techno tracks under the name Jetone.

Today: "Virgins," released in the fall, landed on Best of 2013 lists from publications as diverse as Spin and Mojo.

Tomorrow: David Fincher should invite Hecker to follow in Trent Reznor's footsteps and score one of his films.

2 Betty Who

Thursday at Schubas

Sound in five words or fewer: Electropop with heart.

Yesterday: The Aussie singer got a taste of viral video fame when her song "Somebody Loves You" soundtracked a flash mob marriage proposal in a hardware store. The video has been viewed more than 11 million times.

Today: The singer is hard at work on her full-length debut, which is expected out on RCA by year's end.

Tomorrow: We could see the singer opening arena shows for the likes of Pink by the fall.

Snarky Puppy

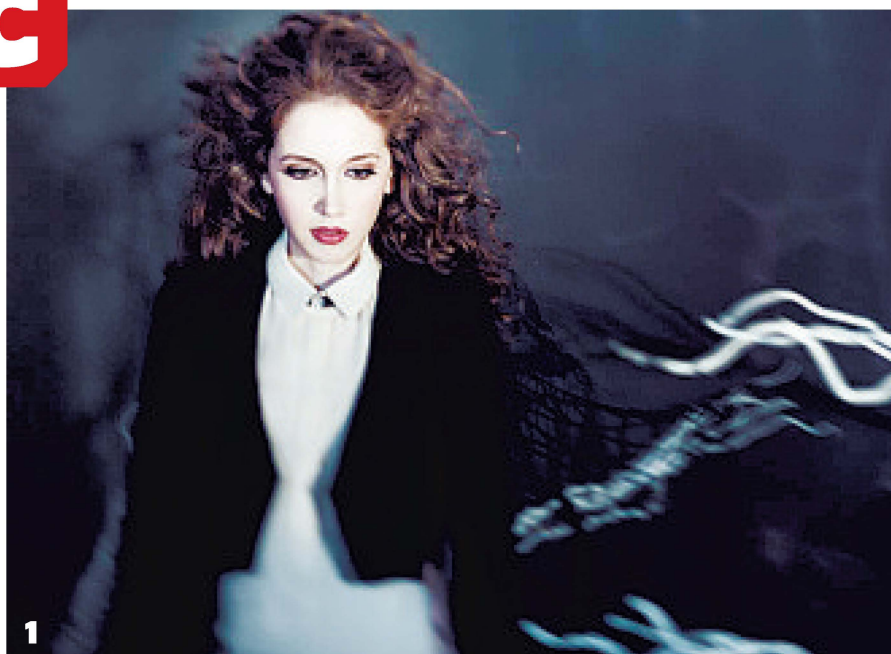

Thursday at Metro

Sound in five words or fewer: Hydra-headed jazz/rock mashup.

Yesterday: The Brooklyn-based crew's rotating cast includes musicians who have performed alongside Erykah Badu, Justin Timberlake, Snoop Dogg and more.

Today: Snarky Puppy is putting the finishing touches on its latest full-length, expected out next month.

Tomorrow: The malleable crew would excel in the Roots-on-Fallon role. Does Seth Meyers have a house band for his in-progress late-night show yet?

A VIEW OF TOMORROW

10 acts not to miss at Tomorrow Never Knows Fest

By Andy Downing | FOR REDEYE

For five nights this week, the annual Tomorrow Never Knows fest takes over Chicago, bringing a smattering of up-and-comers and select vets to a handful of local venues. These are 10 of the top artists appearing—with info on each act's past, present and (in the spirit of the festival) future so you can know before you go.

3 Darkside

Friday at Metro

Sound in five words or fewer: Witching hour electronic blues.

Yesterday: Nicolas Jaar and Dave Harrington launched the project after meeting as students at Brown University.

Today: In 2013, the duo remixed Daft Punk

("Random Access Memories Memories") and released its critically lauded debut, "Psychic."

Tomorrow: A high-profile slot at this summer's Pitchfork Music Festival wouldn't surprise.

4 The Lone Bellow

Friday at Athenaeum Theatre

Sound in five words or fewer: Big-city roots-rock.

Yesterday: Frontman Zach Williams started playing music after his wife experienced temporary paralysis following a horseback riding accident.

Today: The Brooklyn-based group's self-titled debut established it as the rightful heirs to the Lumineers/Mumford crown.

Tomorrow: The band should delve further into its country roots and lobby for a slot on the Grand Ole Opry.

San Fermin

Saturday at Schubas

Sound in five words or fewer: Folk-pop with classical leanings.

Yesterday: The ambitious crew's self-titled debut earned praise from the likes of NPR and Paul Krugman (!?).

Today: San Fermin celebrated its first year as a band with a sold-out December show at the Music Hall of Williamsburg in Brooklyn.

Tomorrow: We'd love to hear the group perform its elaborate, cinematic tunes alongside a full orchestra sometime in 2014.

5 Superchunk

Saturday at Metro

Sound in five words or fewer: Exuberant indie rock, grown up.

Yesterday: The indie rock vets formed in '89—the same year band members Mac McCaughan and Laura Ballance launched beloved indie label Merge Records.

Today: The band's latest full-length, "I Hate Music," finds the crew in fine fighting form more than two decades on.

Tomorrow: It seems greedy to ask more of the rockers, but we'd love to see a live album to cap this late-career winning streak.

6 Diarrhea Planet

Sunday at Lincoln Hall

Sound in five words or fewer: Guitar-driven pop-punk madness.

Yesterday: The Nashville group, which employs four (!) guitarists, has performed alongside the likes of Titus Andronicus.

Today: The band's sophomore album, "I'm Rich Beyond Your Wildest Dreams," surfaced in August and found the crew exploring a sound far more mature than their juvenile name would suggest.

Tomorrow: A summer show in NYC's Flushing Meadows Corona Park would be divine, no?

Indians

Sunday at Schubas

Sound in five words or fewer: Minimalist folk for chilly nights.

Yesterday: Copenhagen native Soren Lokke Juul—the lone man behind the band name—performed his first show in February 2012 and since has opened for everyone from Beirut to Savages.

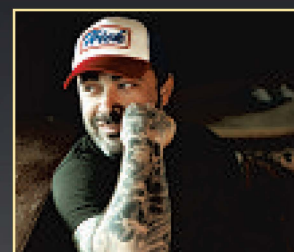

Today: Juul recently booked a pair of February shows with the Copenhagen Philharmonic Orchestra.

Tomorrow: Indians' debut, "Somewhere Else," often gets compared to Bon Iver. Why not head to northern Wisconsin and bounce a few musical ideas off Mr. Justin Vernon himself?

The Walking Dead Season 2: All That Remains

The Walking Dead Season 2: All That Remains

PC, PlayStation 3, Xbox 360

There are few child characters in video games, and the ones that do exist tend to be pawns of the action with no real inner lives of their own. Yet in the first episode of Season 2 of gaming's excellent "The Walking Dead" series, you play as Clementine—a preteen girl on her own during the zombie apocalypse after her traveling companions meet a tragic end. Clementine is neither a cold badass like "Tomb Raider's" Lara Croft, nor a simpering trophy waiting to be rescued, instead demonstrating equal parts toughness and vulnerability. This first episode sets up stark life-or-death decisions that have grown familiar over previous "Walking Dead" episodes, but the way they're centered around a young girl instead of a typical cast of video-game heroes makes it feel fresh.

Republique

"Republique" features a clever premise—you play a hacker who breaks into the facility of a totalitarian state that has captured a woman and plans to brainwash her. You have no direct control over the captive, instead using security cameras and tech tricks to act as her eyes and ears as she slips past security guards into ever more dangerous territory. The voice acting and visuals are spectacular, and the Big Brother is Watching You setting feels timely in the wake of Edward Snowden's NSA leaks, but "Republique" falls hard when you actually try to play it. Constantly panning video feeds gets tedious quickly, and getting captured by a guard—which happens often—means you start over from the beginning every time.

Ridge Racer Slipstream

iPhone/iPad

Trying to bottle up an adrenaline-pumping racing experience into a mobile phone or tablet isn't the easiest task, but "Ridge Racer Slipstream" makes an admirable run of it. Begin by picking your control method from a combination of tilts and taps, and automatic or manual acceleration, and then peel around asphalt tracks while leaving your rivals in the dust. Winning earns you cash to pimp your ride with various upgrades. The only major drawback? "Slipstream's" wonky drifting mechanic means your car often will ignore the laws of physics in quenching your never-ending need for speed.

KAITLYN MCQUAD FOR REDEYE

A speedy build-your-own pizza
shop opens in Lakeview

By Michael Nigrant | FOR REDEYE

On a day after a college-worthy bender when your stomach is sloshing like a beer-filled fishbowl, there is only one antidote: pizza. But not just any pizza. You have your usual place. It's some spartan backroom where the dudes behind the counter are impossibly happy (there's a good chance a bong was involved, or maybe just a really good employee training program) even though the oven breathes hellfire and everyone there is hungover or still hammered from last night. The thing is, the pizza is kinda gloppy and floppy. You like it mostly because it is cheap, quick and oozes with soothing grease. It doesn't have to be that way. What if you could have all these things—happy cooks, value pricing, super-speedy service—and great pizza? At Lakeview's Blaze, a new design-your-own pizza emporium, you might be able to.

The crust: Cheap pizza usually means cheap crust. Though the 11-inch pies at Blaze range from a wallet-pleasing $5 for basic cheese to $7.45 for specialty pizzas, the crust is excellent. It's given a 24-hour rise and cooked in a gas-fired open hearth-style oven for 2 to 3 minutes until it comes out blistered and crackling. My only quibble is that one way they save time is that instead of hand-stretching the dough, they use bright orange dough presses (which look like medieval torture devices invented by Mario Batali) to stamp out perfect circles every time. The presses produce a built-up outer lip, but they also stamp out some of the awesome pillowy rise at the edges. "I have worked tirelessly with our dough press manufacturer to create one that does not compromise the lightness and texture of the finished pizza," executive chef Brad Kent said. "Yes, the idea of pressing a crust does seem aggressive on the dough ... [but] if we were to hand toss, we could overwork and also toughen the dough. This is less likely with the press." Gluten-free dough is also available.

The toppings: I know some people consider barbecue chicken pizza ($7.45) the satanic offspring of California Pizza Kitchen, but I've always loved it. Blaze's version includes the usual chicken, red onion and barbecue sauce, but steps it up with mozzarella and funky, sweet gorgonzola, plus pickled banana peppers that add an acidic zing that cuts through the rich cheese. Speaking of California, you can get artichokes and arugula on the pies at Blaze, and the cheese selection includes shredded and fresh mozzarella, ricotta, goat and vegan cheese. Pepperoni, bacon and the usual meaty suspects are joined by crumbled meatballs and salami.

BELMONT IS ONLY THE BEGINNING

Levy Family Partners, founded by Larry Levy, chairman and founder of Levy Restaurants, has plans to develop 14 other Blaze locations in the Chicago area. Two other Blaze restaurants are currently in development at 555 W. Madison St. and 227 E. Ontario St.

The sauce: In addition to the barbecue sauce, which had a nice hint of smoke and sweetness, there's tangy classic red tomato sauce, spicy red tomato sauce and white cream sauce. I tried the white sauce on Blaze's signature White Top pie ($7.45), featuring peppery arugula, thick bits of bacon and a nice seasoning of sweet garlic and spicy floral oregano. Unfortunately, the pungent toppings overpowered the cream and it was tough to tell what it tasted like.

The service: Like the cashiers at Trader Joe's, there's an overeager, almost unnatural cheerfulness in Blaze's staffers, or as they are called, "pizza-smiths." These folks make your pizza freaky fast. You can help them build your pie by selecting ingredients, which are laid out on the counter in front of you, just like at Chipotle. Watching the dough get topped and sent to the oven reminded me of one of those car washes with the windows to watch the brushes, soapers and dryers doing their thing.

Other stuff: I tried the s'more pie ($2), a graham cracker-chocolate-marshmallow creation that's heated to order in the pizza oven until it transforms in to a gooey, addictive dessert sandwich. Also, Blaze sports the first blood orange lemonade fountains I've ever seen. Most diners opted for the regular lemonade, but I loved the bright, sour punch of the blood orange flavor ($2.25).

The bottom line: Blaze's quick service, casual vibe and value pricing makes it feel like the sleek commercial version of those college pizza joints where you spent a lot of post-drinking time. Unlike those places, these high-quality pies will be attractive to anyone who likes good pizza.

3 TREATS WE CAN'T STOP THINKING ABOUT

Crudo ($10-$22)

Nico Osteria, 1015 N. Rush St. 312-994-7100

This highly anticipated new Italian restaurant in the Gold Coast offers almost a dozen types of seafood crudo—that's Italian for "raw"—and I could nearly make a meal just from this section of the menu. I first tried the delicately sliced spiny lobster, studded with bright, mouth-puckering shreds of preserved lemon. The big eye tuna with ice wine vinegar was meaty, fresh and sprinkled with breadcrumbs for added texture. Next on my list? The snapper topped with kohlrabi salsa and sea fern. KATE BERNOT, REDEYE

Time Is on My Cider ($9)

Three Aces, 1321 W. Taylor St. 312-243-1577

At Three Aces, a rock 'n' roll gastropub in Little Italy that offers a refined craft beer list alongside an equally strong menu of Italian countryside-meets-American farmhouse fare, the signature cocktails are in a class of their own. The Time is on My Cider cocktail is an unfussy seasonal drink that is just as strikingly delicious as it is clever. Plus, the robust and inviting mélange of spiced Seedling Farms Cider, 81 proof Wild Turkey bourbon, Monkey Shoulder blended scotch, fresh lemon juice and sage is perfect for warming up in cold weather, making this $9 cocktail a must-try winter treat. TRIBE

Mionetto il Ugo ($11.99)

Available at Blinn's locations and other select liquor stores

I'm a big fan of Mionetto's proseccos as well as il Spritz, an orange-flavored bottled cocktail meant to emulate the traditional Italian Aperol spritz. So when I heard at this summer's Chicago Gourmet event that Mionetto was launching another bottled cocktail, I could hardly wait until it hit shelves. Il Ugo is similarly sparkling, with flavors of mint, elderflower and citrus. Poured over ice or simply chilled, it's elegant and delicious—and was a hit at the holiday party I brought it along to. LISA ARNETT, REDEYE

SECRET AGENTS ARE LURKING EVERYWHERE ON TV IN 2014

By Curt Wagner | REDEYE
From "The Avengers" to "Mission: Impossible" to "24," spy thrillers always have been a TV staple, but with the National Security Agency under fire for keeping tabs on everyday Americans and others, espionage stories seem all the more resonant these days. Here's a look at several current or upcoming spy shows and several old favorites that can be seen online, plus where the spies from the shows stack up on our Threat Level chart.

● Archer 9 p.m. Mondays, FX
Sterling Archer and the former ISIS gang must find a new home base in Season 5. That's right, the International Secret Intelligence Service falls on (self-inflicted) hard times and will be operating outside the law. Business as usual for these folks.

● 24: Live Another Day 7 p.m. May 5, Fox
Yes, Jack Bauer (Kiefer Sutherland) will be back to save the world again, but the 24 hours will take place in just 12 episodes this time. At least part of the action will take place in London and will reunite Sutherland with former castmates Kim Raver, William Devane and Mary Lynn Rajsckub. (Watch past seasons on Netflix, Hulu, iTunes and Amazon Prime.)

● The Americans 9 p.m. Feb. 26, FX
In Season 2, U.S.-based KGB spies Philip (Matthew Rhys) and Elizabeth Jennings (Keri Russell) face dangers from not only 1980s styles and outside threats, but from daughter Paige (Holly Taylor), who does a little snooping into what her parents are doing at all hours.

● The Assets 9 p.m. Thursdays, ABC
This fact-based, eight-part miniseries tells the story of disgraced American CIA officer Aldrich Ames (Paul Rhys), who sold secrets to the Soviet Union between 1985 and 1993 that resulted in the betrayal of America's Cold War weapons—moles and secret agents. The series follows agents Sandra Grimes and Jeanne Vertefeuille as they meticulously work to ferret out the traitor.

● Intelligence 8 p.m. Mondays, CBS
Josh Holloway plays Gabriel, a Delta Force vet now working for a U.S. government cyber-security agency. Gabriel isn't your run-of-the-mill sexy spy; he has a microchip in his brain that allows him access to the global info grid, including Internet, Wi-Fi, telephone and satellite data.

● Homeland Fall, Showtime
Now that traitor-turned-patriot Brody (Damian Lewis) proved his worth (I'm trying to stay spoiler-free here), the series faces a reset in Season 4. It'll likely involve Carrie (Claire Danes) crying and going off her meds. I hope we get to see more of Peter Quinn (Rupert Friend).

● Covert Affairs Summer, USA
After faking her own death, CIA spy Annie Walker (Piper Perabo) finally disposed of a major, long-running threat in the recent Season 4 finale. How she'll return to Langley in Season 5 remains to be seen.

● Turn 8 p.m. April 6, AMC
Based on Alexander Rose's "Washington's Spies" about America's first spy ring, this Revolutionary War-set thriller follows the Culper Ring through the experience of Long Island farmer and initially reluctant spy Abe Woodhull, played by Jamie Bell.

● Fleming: The Man Who Would Be Bond 9 p.m. Jan. 29, BBC America
In this four-parter, Dominic Cooper plays Ian Fleming, the dashing British playboy who used his wild imagination as a British spymaster during World War II before using real-life adventures as inspiration for his creation of the world's most iconic fictional spy, James Bond.

Bale's straight talk on 'American Hustle' con man

Los Angeles Times

Sometimes, when adapting history for the big screen, a few fabrications are required.

Take, for example, Irving Rosenfeld, the schlubby Bronx huckster Christian Bale plays in the period caper "American Hustle." A consummate swindler with a fondness for jewel-toned velvet jackets and an outrageously bad toupee, the character is inspired by real-life con man Melvin Weinberg. But the actor is careful to point out that they are not the same person.

"Mel would absolutely kick me ... if I ever said it was him," Bale, 39, said with a grin. "He'd say he's far too flamboyant. I had somebody describing Irv as being quite sweet, and I know Mel would just want to vomit. ... For it to truly be a proper character, you have to go beyond an imitation. You have to have the license to be able to create something more."

It's certainly true that "American Hustle" is a wild, euphoric exercise in creative extrapolation. A fictionalized account of the FBI's Abscam sting operation of the late '70s and early '80s, the film centers on Rosenfeld, who finds himself at the mercy of hapless agent Richie DiMaso (Bradley Cooper), who is determined to make his reputation by nabbing dirty politicians—and possibly mobsters.

"He's the consummate con man who cons nobody with what's happening at the top of his head," Bale said. "It's like one ear throwing a lifeline to the other one, and nobody is fooled by it whatsoever. That is so much more interesting than playing [him] for some sort of slick character."

Before December had concluded, director David O. Russell's gleefully garish romp had captured numerous critics' honors, in addition to Screen Actors Guild and Golden Globe nominations. (Bale was nominated for a Globe for lead actor in a comedy or musical.)

While the actor said he's quite comfortable feeling out a path for his character, Russell's unusual process did lead to some conflict.

"We had a little period when we were [butting heads] on the set, all for a desire to come up with the best work," Bale said. "We've been through that before. There are different dynamics with different people. With David, I know that his heart and mind are very unique and absolutely sincere and that we are going to come up with something very interesting. So be it if we have to rock and roll a little bit in order to get there."

As for the new accolades that might come his way, Bale is somewhat circumspect. Recognition is appreciated, he said, but it isn't what motivates him. The actor is more concerned about moving on to the next great acting challenge.

"I'm human. I would absolutely be lying if I said it's unimportant to me," Bale said before clarifying his point. "'Importance' is the wrong word, but does it give you a sense of pride? Yes. Human beings saying we like what you've done, we'd like to give you something that shows how much we liked what you've done."

A NEW YEAR MEANS NEW PROJECTS FOR CELEBS

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

While you're trying to lose weight and become a better communicator for the new year, celebs have people who do that stuff for them.

Instead, they're able to focus on a bevy of brand-new work. See if you can match the titles below to the list of projects, and don't feel too bad. We haven't lost our holiday tummies either.

THE QUOTE

"Everybody had dreadlocks in Newark, and it started with braids, so I was like, OK, I wanna grow my hair out. So there's this stage where you go from this to this weird fro. ... Those modeling pictures were not kind."

—"Fruitvale Station" star Michael B. Jordan, to BuzzFeed, on his hair when he first started in showbiz. Fortunately for us, he's gotten a lot more handsome since then.

Golden 'Idols'

Sorry, Jennifer Hudson. Carrie Underwood still reigns supreme when it comes to the top-earning "American Idol" stars of 2013, forbes.com reports. Here's the lucky few and how much they made:

1. Carrie Underwood: $31 million
2. Kelly Clarkson: $7 million
3. Phillip Phillips: $5 million
3. Adam Lambert: $5 million
5. Daughtry: $4 million
10. Jennifer Hudson: $1 million

Kanye Whoops

Looks like Kanye West might be headed to court. TMZ reports the rapper is being investigated by the LAPD for allegedly attacking an 18-year-old man in a chiropractor's waiting room Monday. Fiancee Kim Kardashian called Kanye to the scene after the man swore at her using racial slurs. Yeezy also is due in court Jan. 23 for a scuffle with a photographer at an airport.

T.R. Knight and Patrick Leahy

Ciara and T.R. Knight have a lot to celebrate in 2014. The "Body Party" singer confirmed Tuesday on "The View" that she's pregnant with her first child. Her fiancé, rapper-producer Future, has three kids. And Knight, the former "Grey's Anatomy" star, married his boyfriend of three years, Patrick Leahy, on Friday in upstate New York, people.com reports. Buds from the show Katherine Heigl and Kate Walsh were in attendance.

HOT DATE MARCH 3

That's when Chicago rapper Chief Keef's next mixtape, "Bang 3," is approximately set to drop, he tweeted Tuesday. We'll be calling it "Bang Bang Bang."

The doctor is online

Lisa Kudrow is (still) here to help. Her Showtime series, "Web Therapy," has been picked up for a fourth season, thr.com reports. While the online version of the show wraps its fifth season in February, the 10-episode new season doesn't have a premiere date yet. It's probably to give us time to find tissues for wiping away our tears of laughter.
